DETAILED ACTION

Claims 1-5 and 7 are included in the prosecution of this application.

Preliminary Amendment A on July 5, 2001 is acknowledged.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-4 and 7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Kydonieus et al (5580573).

Kydonieus et al teach a temperature controlled polymeric device. The device is used for topical application (col. 3, lines 11-13 and claim 4). The device can be constructed in three types, one being a combined monolithic reservoir (Note Fig. 3). In this system a rate-controlling polymer encapsulates the active-polymer layer (col. 2, lines 56 to col. 3, line 5). The rate-controlling layer has a T_g in the range of 20 to 50 degrees. The non-rate controlling polymer containing the active agent has a low T_g. The polymeric components of the device have high molecular weights. (Note col. 3, lines 25-57).

Claims 1-5 and 7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Chien et al (5023084).

Chien et al disclose a transdermal system containing a backing layer, a polymer layer, and an adhesive layer (Note example 8). The first layer contains an active agent and polyacrylic adhesive (reservoir layer), the second layer contains polyisobutylene polymer (high molecular weight polymer), and the third layer contains polyacrylic adhesive and an active agent (example 8). Further, the example teaches laminating the polymer layers. The active agent is administered in a controlled manner (col. 10, lines 35-46). Chien et al teach the method of estrogen therapy by placing the system on the skin of a subject (Note claims).
